In order to get ahead, you've got to stand out, not fade out.

Stand and Deliver. A thought that strikes fear in many people. Studies have shown that fear of speaking up in public ranks in the top 5 fears that people have, for some it ranks even higher than the fear of dying.

Yet, in today's knowledge based world the ability to clearly communicate your ideas and get others to "buy in" to them is critical to your success.

In fact the quickest way to gain credibility in business is through stand up presentations, it is also, unfortunately, the quickest way to lose credibility, if you mess it up.

If you cannot express your ideas clearly and passionately, in order to get other people to buy into and support them, then you are worse off than someone who has no ideas at all.

Have you ever experienced the frustration of knowing that you have this great idea or plan but no-one you speak to seems to understand it, or see it's value?

Have you ever stood up to deliver your presentation and felt like your brain had stayed sitting down?

Have you ever suffered from sweaty palms, pounding heart, erratic breathing and squeaky voice when you stand in front of an audience to give a presentation?

When you get called on to make a presentation do you wish that you were someone else, somewhere else, doing something else?

Well you are not alone, but the great news is that you don't have to stay this way.

Have you ever been to a presentation where you sat in awe of the presenters ability to present flawlessly, to not be fazed by interruptions, to handle questions without hesitation and thought "I wish I could be like that"? Well you can be and you should be.

Imagine being confident and poised and eloquent in front of any group.

Imagine how it will feel when you are congratulated on yet another superb performance.

Imagine what it would do for your career, to have the skills of a professional presenter.

Imagine your sense of pleasure and pride as the audience enthusiastically gives you a standing ovation.

Imagine ....

Communication is an attempt, using supposedly common symbols,
